Swarming Creatures

locust = six-legged, winged insect that is characterized by the fact that its third pair of legs is elongated and adapted to hopping; insects of this type move in swarms at certain periods and migrate to new areas, which they colonize; at other times they live either solitary or in small groups; ◀ Acrididae family; ▶ normally eaten cooked by toasting, grilling, frying, or broiling, though in some places they are also eaten raw; clean animal, that may be eaten; ≈ associated with large quantities and destruction

AMO 7:1 · NAM 3:171

1 NAM 3:17 The phrase כְּגֹב גָּבִי “like a locust of locusts” is normally taken as a case of dittography from an original כְּגֹבִי “like locusts”, as per LXX. Most versions translate it as a collective noun phrase: RSV “like clouds of locusts”, NJPS “like piles of hoppers”, NJB “like swarms of hoppers”, NIV “like swarms of locusts”. The Vulgate follows the MT more closely “quasi lucustae lucustarum”, “like (the) locusts of locusts”.

1 JOB 21:32 · JOB 5:26 The close association with sheaves and death in “You will come to the grave in ripe old age, as shocks are taken away in their season”, suggests that the meaning of [2] may be related to [1]. Similarly, DCH lists all four uses under one base meaning “shock (of grain)”, saying that in Job 21:32 perhaps it is used collectively to mean burial mound.
