Great | verb qal

to be prominent, to stand out = to possess more of a certain quality than one's peers and therefore stand out among them; ◄ compared to a banner, which, when one looks at an army, is prominently visible

SNG 5:10

1 PSA 20:6 DCH suggests a possible alternative, “wait upon”, from a proposed root דגל II, “look, wait upon” 2 SNG 6:4 · SNG 6:10 Most versions and scholars interpret נִדְגְלוּ as deriving from דָּגַל “banner”. Another possibility takes דגל as meaning “look” (HALOT | DCH) and the pt. pass. as “sight”; the arguments are well presented by Gerleman, Ruth/Hohelied, p. 182–83 (cf. also Zakovitch, Das Hohelied, p.232–33). If נִדְגְלוּ is taken as pointing to the stars (REB CEV), then the meaning here would be “majestic as the stars”. In this case, the lexical domain would be “Universe > Intense”, and the contextual domain “Beauty | Nature > Human”.

דָּגַר (H1716)

verb

Cover | verb qal | בקע

to hatch = to sit upon eggs for a prolonged period ► in order to provide the warmth that is needed for the eggs to hatch at the proper time

ISA 34:151 · JER 17:11

1 ISA 34:15 The exact meaning of דָּגַר here is much discussed. There is a succession of 3 verbs indicating actions of a mother-bird in relation to eggs. NRSV translates בקע as “hatch” and דָּגַר as “brood”, and NJPS the other way round, though interpreting them as practically synonyms | RSV REB “gather”, implying a movement that either comes before the hatching or (in some way) after it, as the order in the text suggests. The best course could be to follow the meaning of דָּגַר in JER 17:11, which with more probability points to “hatch”.
