Scrolls

scroll = long strip of writing material made by sewing together sheets of papyrus or parchment; this strip was then rolled up from one end or from both ends to form one or two cylinders; usually the ends of the scroll were attached to sticks, around which the scroll was rolled; an unrolled scroll was often about 10 meters in length and stood approximately 23–25 centimeters high; the term מגלת־ספר seems to be the more complete term for a book scroll, as it occurs at the beginning of passages in which scrolls play a roll; the shorter term מגלה is used after that

1 LEV 5:8 The way this word is used in this passage shows that the head of the bird is severed at the front but left attached to the rump at the back. 2 NUM 22:5 The reason why מוֹלֵד is preceded by מִן in this passage is not exactly clear | in view of the context the most plausible explanation is that Balak wants to stress the closeness of Israel | NJB and REB have brought this out clearly by using the expression “at my very door”. 3 NEH 12:38 HOTTP-B NIV NJPS CEV מוֹלֵד | MT לְמוֹאֵל | RSV NJB NRSV REB GNT “left” | the interpretation of HOTTP-B has probably been inspired by the gloss “opposite”, which several English translations use to render the word מוֹלֵד | though “opposite” can be used to indicate the relative closeness of two locations (e.g.), it should not be used to indicate opposite directions, which is outside of the scope of the meaning of this word | for that reason the interpretation of RSV et al. is to be preferred. 4 MIC 2:8 It is assumed, along with HOTTP-B that the אֶדְרֵי represents a piece of clothing that is worn over the שְׁלֵמָה | see for instance TOB “... dessus la tunique, vous enlevez le manteau ...”

1 2KI 10:24 Most commentators have argued that the verb should be read as a piel instead of a niph'al 2 PSA 33:17 Although the passive of σῶζω in the LXX implies the reading of a niph'al (יִפְלֹט) cf. Tg) rather than the piel, the verb may not require revocalisation. There may be an implied indefinite object, and the Peshitta does include an object in its translation (see piel Versions, Peshitta). 3 AMO 2:15 The passive of διασῶζω in the LXX implies the reading of the niph'al (יִפְלֹט) cf. Vg, Tg, Pesh), but this may be a characteristic alteration by the Versions to assist the sense. The piel, if retained, would have to be interpreted as intransitive, or to share the same object נפשו with the verb in the next line.

1 JER 7:18 The original reading of the passages in Jeremiah is the “queen of heaven”, i.e. the mother goddess. cf. versions: LXX, Vg, Aq, Sym, Th. The cakes offered to the deity in Jer 7:18; 44:19 may have been star-shaped. The most likely candidates for the title in Jer 7 and 44 are the West Semitic Astarte and the Mesopotamian Ishtar, both of whom are fertility goddesses identified with Venus, the morning and evening star. Both were offered cakes as part of their cult, though it is only Ishtar in whose image cakes were baked and whose cult held a particular appeal for women. Ishtar was known as the queen or lady of heaven. Queen of Heaven in Jeremiah is therefore a syncretistic deity, combining aspects of Astarte and Ishtar.

Leaders

anointed (one) = a (non-eschatological) ruler appointed by God and anointed with oil by a prophet or priest In the post-exilic period an ideology of “bicephalic leadership” seems to have existed, argued on the basis of Zec 6.12–14; 4.2–3,11–14; 8.9–17, Hag 1.12–14. This king-priest duality is found strongly in Chronicles too, which evaluates Israelite history in these very terms of shared leadership. However, neither Jubilees nor Qumran cite Haggai or Zechariah in this context. For further reading cf. SAHD article.
